

Save the Date

Demo and a Show

David Pogue

Will talk about Vista and his latest books
Windows Vista: the Missing Manual
Vista for Starters: The Missing Manual

Tue March 20th
(Not our usual date)
PS 41
116 West 11th Street
Doors Open at 6:00 pm
Presentation at 7:00 pm
The Meeting is Free

David Pogue is the New York Times “State of the Art” weekly circuits columnist. He also writes online columns and makes very amusing video Podcasts on technology topics. He can frequently be seen on CBS News.

David has just published two new “Missing Manuals” on Microsoft’s new operating system Vista. He has a remarkable talent for clearly explaining technology, and even making Microsoft’s operating system a fun read. In 1999 he started writing a series of computer books called the Missing Manual series. He has written 40 computer books on various topics. I keep a well thumbed copy of his Windows XP Missing Manual near my desk.

The last time David came to our meeting he talked about his book on the invention of the Palm Pilot - “Piloting Palm”. He asked if we could get a cheapie electronic keyboard so he could sing some of the computer spoof songs he had written. We were unable to get him an electronic keyboard but we did provide a concert grand and his songs were great. The auditorium at PS 41 has two Baby Grand’s. Who knows what he has in store for us this time.

<http://www.missingmanuals.com/>
<http://www.davidpogue.com/>
http://www.davidpogue.com/pogue_unplugged/songspoofs.html
<http://pogue.blogs.nytimes.com/2006/12/13/13pogues-posts-5/>

William Zeph Ginsberg
NYPC Program Chairman